Exhibits celebrate an art legacy

RACINE — Charles A. Wustum Museum of Fine Arts, Racine Art Museum’s forebear, was founded on Nov. 16, 1941. Throughout 2017, RAM will celebrate Wustum’s continuing legacy of bringing art to our community and the world for 75 years. Open through April 30 at RAM, 441 Main St., “Wustum Generations” features works by artists who have been essential to the development of Wustum and RAM.

For decades, Wustum has embraced and been embraced by members of the Racine community. The museum offers exhibitions, classes and workshops; hosts special events on its scenic and inspiring grounds; and functions as an artistic beacon for the region. Involving working artists — both from the area and beyond — in planning and executing all manner of programs and cultivating fundamental relationships has ensured that Wustum and RAM remain vital.

When RAM came into existence in 2003, the role of the artist in institutional development necessarily expanded in need and scope. Artists who have played important roles at Wustum and RAM have done so not just as working artists, but also as teachers, donors, board members, volunteers, committee members, staff, activists, catalysts for large gifts, benefactors and donors of significant archives. The artists included in this exhibition fulfill two criteria — they have been integral to the evolution of Wustum and RAM in one or more capacities and they are represented in the museum’s holdings.

A year of celebration

Many of the exhibitions at Racine Art Museum in 2017 continue the 75th anniversary celebration of RAM’s Wustum Museum. Open Jan. 29–July 9, “Variations on a Theme: Teapots from RAM’s Collection,” features a selection of the museum’s holdings, part of a concentration launched by a pivotal gift of more than 250 teapots from collector Donna Moog. Since that time, RAM has added more than 100 teapots from other donors, establishing one of the largest public collections of contemporary artist-made teapots in the United States.

Open Feb. 19–June 4, “WPA Art from RAM’s Collection” highlights a selection of prints, watercolors, drawings, photographs and textiles generated through the Federal Art Project (FAP) of Works Progress Administration (WPA), a program that provided jobs during the Great Depression of the 1930s. Initially, Wustum became an institution before it had an art collection. The museum’s first director Sylvester Jerry was able to obtain more than 260 works produced through WPA to launch the collection. This effort was visionary for Wustum and RAM since it foreshadowed the current collecting focus works on paper and contemporary craft.

“Main Road, Kendall” is an oil painting created in 1933 by Sylvester Jerry.
