

The Racine Art Museum brings together two acclaimed artists

RACINE — The Racine Art Museum, 441 Main St., has brought together the work of two acclaimed artists, Karen Gunderson and Barbara Sorensen, who call Racine their hometown. “Karen Gunderson: Reflective” and “Barbara Sorensen: Elemental” opened Sunday and continues through April 14.

While one prefers to create paintings and the other sculpture, both Gunderson and Sorensen present insightful and poetic reflections of the natural world. Gunderson’s all black paintings of water, constellations and mountains seem to shimmer and change depending on the angle from which they are viewed. Sorensen’s large-scale mixed media sculptures evoke tide pools, sand dunes and topographical formations.

These exhibitions are presented intermingled in one gallery space, allowing for a “conversation” between the individual objects.

A “Meet the Artists” event will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. on March 22. A discussion is at 7 p.m. Admission is $10, free for Racine Art Museum members.

The Racine Art Museum is open from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Admission is $5 for adults and $3 for seniors and youth ages 12-18. There is no charge for children ages 11 and younger.

THIS WEEK ON WGTD's 'THE MORNING SHOW'

KENOSHA — WGTD (91.1 FM) is owned and operated as a public service of Gateway Technical College and is an affiliate of Wisconsin Public Radio. For an updated schedule, visit its website at www.wgtd.org.

“The Morning Show” airs every weekday morning between 8:10 and 9 a.m. Following is a schedule of show topics for the coming week:

Today — We speak with one of the editors of “Immigrant Struggles-Immigrant Gifts,” which examines the challenges which immigrants have faced in America throughout our history but also the enormous contribution which they have made to our country.

Tuesday — We welcome back the University of Wisconsin-Parkside history professor Sandra Moats, who will talk about the historical accuracy and inaccuracy of Steven Spielberg’s highly acclaimed film “Lincoln,” starring Daniel Day-Lewis and Sally Field.

Wednesday — The hour opens with Dara-Lynn Weiss, author of “The Heavy-A Mother, A Daughter, A Diet — a Memoir.” It tells the controversial story of Weiss’s decision to put her obese 7-year-old daughter on a very strict diet.

Thursday — We speak with Nancy Moldenhauer and Ron Halvorson about the 2013 campaign for RUAF, the Racine United Arts Fund.

Friday — Our guest is Leil Loundes, author of “How to Create Chemistry with Anyone.”

WGTD’s Saturday programming includes “Financial Overview” at 9 a.m., “Breakfast Bytes” at 9:45 a.m., “Education Matters” at 10:30 a.m. and “Community Matters” at 11:15 a.m.
