Supply List
The medium used in this class is the choice of the individual. Students may use oils, acrylics, watercolor or drawing materials and must purchase the appropriate supplies per paint media, including brushes, palette, support (paper, canvas, panel) and mediums. Watercolor, acrylic, and oils all require these basics. There are specific differences that arise when a particular type of paint is chosen. If you are a beginner and have questions please talk to the sales person at your art supply store, contact the instructor before the first class,

Oil and Acrylic Supply Suggestions

Panel
The Fine Touch; Gessoed Artist Panel. This is a great support for oils and is ok for acrylics. I would suggest students get the 12”X16” size for the still life class. If they are going to work in acrylics they can use canvas or canvas board but I still recommend the 12”X16” size.

Suggested Pigments
Titanium white
Ivory black
Burnt umber
Cadmium red light
Cadmium red medium
Alizarin crimson
Naples yellow
Cadmium yellow deep
Lemon yellow
Phthalo blue
Ultramarine blue

Painting Mediums
Both oil and acrylic painters should use a medium. There are premixed oil mediums available and a variety of gel mediums for acrylic painters. Oil painters may choose to mix their own medium. A good recipe is:

20% Stand oil
40% Damar varnish
25% Turpentine
15% Venice turpentine

Brushes
Have a variety, a minimum of 5 or 6. These should include small rounds for details and large flats for broad areas. Masters’ Touch series White Talkon brushes for oils and acrylics. Again these are better for oils than acrylics but should work for both.

Palette knives
Have at least 2. A larger knife for mixing paint and a smaller one with a pointed tip to use as a painting tool.

Containers
Bring containers to hold turpentine and medium for the oil painters, or water and gel for the acrylic painters.
